PARTNERSHIP

We are delighted to celebrate a banner year in partnership with the Archives, connecting more people than ever to America's story thanks to your continuing support.

We are proud to join the National Archives in its "Amending America" national initiative this year and next, including the "Amending America" exhibit in Washington; the "Amending America: The Bill of Rights" traveling exhibit at its first stop at the Houston Museum of Natural Science; and the National Conversations on Rights and Justice in cities across the country.

Thanks to the Weissberg Foundation, visitors to the Rotunda can now learn more about our nation's founding documents through a new free brochure, as well as a new book written by National Archives curator Alice Kamps, which is available exclusively through the National Archives Store.

This summer, we unveiled the all-new NationalArchivesStore.org website, and helped launch the redesigned DocsTeach website and app, an award-winning educational tool used by teachers worldwide to connect students to the rich primary sources at the Archives.

Because our fiscal year spans two calendar years, we celebrated two Galas honoring our newest Records of Achievement Award recipients. In 2015, we honored author Taylor Branch in recognition of his lifelong work to chronicle the life of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the history of the Civil Rights movement. In 2016, we saluted historian Ron Chernow; director Thomas Kail; and composer, lyricist, and performer Lin-Manuel Miranda in recognition of their collective work on the Broadway musical "Hamilton."

Though we have had much to celebrate this year, we must also remember with sadness the passing of Houston philanthropist, long-time supporter, and Board member Jerry Finger, who served on the Board for more than ten years, and was always opening doors for the Foundation and our partners.

In this report, you will learn more about the numerous donors whose generous gifts sustain us and the remarkable milestones we have achieved together. We appreciate all of you - members, donors, National Archives Store customers, and friends - who make our work possible.

A'Lehia Bundles

A'LELIA BUNDLES, Chair and President, National Archives Foundation

What a year! The success of the public-private partnership between the National Archives and Records Administration and the National Archives Foundation continues to reach new heights.

We have welcomed more visitors this year to the museum than ever before, including thousands to public programs like the 9th annual McGowan Forum on Women in Leadership, and educational programs like our popular sleepovers. Thousands more have visited our research facilities across the nation, and millions have explored digitized records through our online catalog and other digital initiatives.

This year we launched our first National Outreach Program Initiative, "Amending America," in celebration of the 225th anniversary of the ratification of the Bill of Rights. The initiative combines exhibits, public programming, and educational materials to introduce people across the country to the important records here at the Archives and connect them to current issues facing Americans every day.

Here in Washington, DC, the initiative is anchored by the "Amending America" exhibit in the Lawrence F. O'Brien Gallery, which is connected by a 225-foot-long banner to the original Bill of Rights in the Rotunda for the Charters of Freedom. The exhibit examines the amendment process and the more than 11,000 proposed—but only 27 ratified—amendments to the Constitution since 1789, which are printed on the banner chronologically.

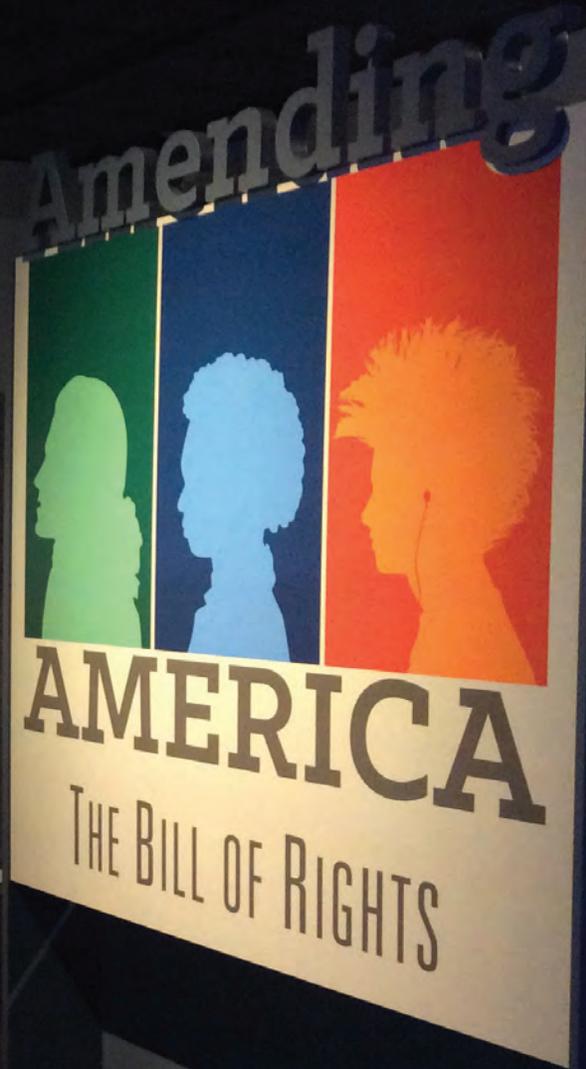

The initiative's National Conversations on Rights and Justice launched in Atlanta and Chicago, with four more planned in New York City, Los Angeles, Dallas, and Washington, DC. Building on our extensive records and hosted with a partner institution, this series delves into a range of contemporary issues, encompassing human and civil rights and addressing the tension between individual rights and collective responsibilities.

The Foundation and its supporters make it possible for us to educate, engage, entertain, and enlighten through our exhibits, public programs, and educational outreach. I am proud to share the achievements of this partnership, and I look forward to our continuing success. Thank you for your support and generosity.

"AMENDING AMERICA" EXHIBIT

MARCH 11, 2016 - SEPTEMBER 4, 2017
O'BRIEN GALLERY, NATIONAL ARCHIVES MUSEUM
WASHINGTON, DC

In celebration of the 225th anniversary of the ratification of the Bill of Rights on December 15, 2016, the National Archives launched the national "Amending America" initiative. Only 27 times—out of more than 11,000 proposals—have Americans reached consensus to amend the Constitution. Featuring original records, videos, an interactive elements, the exhibit explores the difficult process to turn an idea into an amendment and the recurring themes that concern Americans.

CHARTERS OF FREEDOM

From their beginnings in the original 13 colonies to their current permanent home at the National Archives Museum in Washington, DC, the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, and the Bill of Rights form the basis of our American society and government, and are the primary reason that more than one million people visit the National Archives Museum each year.

Written by National Archives curator Alice Kamps and available exclusively from the National Archives Store, the new book The Charters of Freedom at the National Archives explores the creation and life of these three milestone documents. In addition, visitors can now look more closely at and gain a deeper understanding of the meaning of our founding documents during and after their visit to the museum with a new keepsake brochure available free in the museum and online.

JULY 4TH at the National Archives

This year's Independence Day celebration at the National Archives was bigger than ever with more than 21,000 people coming from all over the country to join us at the home of the Declaration! Since July 4th fell on a Monday this year, we extended the celebration all weekend long, with musical performances on the steps of the National Archives building, a National Archives Store tent on the lawn, and educational activities in the Boeing Learning Center. On July 4th itself, we welcomed members to our annual "Promise of America" breakfast before joining thousands of visitors for the annual Declaration of Independence Reading Ceremony on the steps of the Archives.

Expanding the celebration to those across the country, our dedicated site ArchivesJuly4.org provided historic context, information about the National Archives, the livestream of the annual ceremony, and even the chance to "sign" the Declaration online! More than 1,500 people digitally signed our nation's founding document. For the second year, we hosted a national giveaway for a trip for four to come to Washington, DC, for July 4th. Out of nearly 14,000 entries, Christina George of Michigan was randomly selected as our winner and enjoyed a patriotic weekend in DC with her family.

2015: TAYLOR BRANCH

On October 28, 2015, we honored American author and Pulitzer Prize winner Taylor Branch with our 2015 Records of Achievement Award in recognition of his lifelong work to chronicle the life of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the history of the Civil Rights movement in his landmark series America in the King Years. Mr. Branch's efforts to preserve the legacy of one of the most influential periods in American history emphasizes the essential value that the National Archives, whose holdings include original records of the Civil Rights movement including the landmark legislation outlawing discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin: The Civil Rights Act of 1964.

2016: RON CHERNOW, THOMAS KAIL, AND LIN-MANUEL MIRANDA

On September 25, 2016, we presented the 2016 Records of Achievement Award to Pulitzer Prize-winning historian Ron Chernow; Tony and Emmy Award-winning film and theater director Thomas Kail; and award-winning composer, lyricist, and performer Lin-Manuel Miranda in recognition of their collective work on the Tony, Grammy, and Pulitzer Prize-winning Broadway musical "Hamilton." Inspired by Chernow's 2004 biography, "Hamilton" re-imagines Alexander Hamilton's compelling life and death. Written by and starring Miranda and directed by Kail, the musical's daring storytelling has transformed the contents of our history textbooks into an exciting cultural phenomenon.

ABOUT THE RECORDS OF ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

The Records of Achievement Award is our highest honor, given to individuals whose work has fostered a broader national awareness of the history and identity of the United States through the use of original National Archives records. Previous recipients of this award include: Steven Spielberg, Ken Burns, David M. Rubenstein, the late John Hope Franklin, David McCullough, Tom Brokaw, Annette Gordon-Reed, Brian Lamb and C-SPAN, James McPherson, and Robert Edsel.

DIGITIZATION & ACCESS

Over the past three years, the National Archives Foundation has been able to fund a large-scale digitization and outreach project for its extensive holdings of photographs and film reels from World Wars I and II. Equally important to making the records digitally available, the Archives seeks to increase public access to and creative reuse of these historical American records.

75,000 PHOTOGRAPHS have been added to the National Archives' online catalog

356 REELS OF FILM, totaling more than 67 hours of content, have been uploaded to YouTube

800 CITIZEN PARTICIPANTS transcribed films and tagged the silent films with finding aids

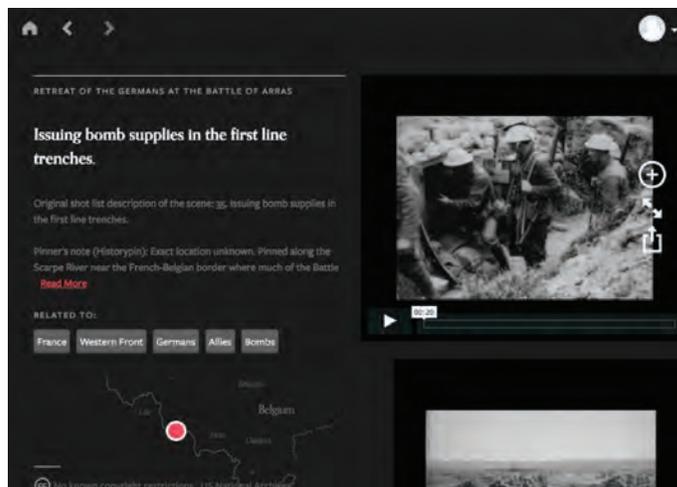

One of the restored and digitized films is The True Glory, which won the Academy Award for Best Documentary Feature in 1945. Documenting the events at the end of World War II, the film uses first-person narratives from multiple nationalities and roles, including the perspective of women and African-Americans. In addition to sharing on YouTube, where it has been viewed nearly a quarter of a million times, The True Glory was premiered in its new digital format in the William G. McGowan Theater.

Together with Historypin, the Archives created a mobile application designed for tablets, providing a unique, localized, and tactile experience of exploring WWI content pulled from the Archives, the Smithsonian, the Library of Congress, and the National WWI Museum. This first-of-a-kind application allows users to geographically explore films that have been broken into location-specific clips and mapped.

As a national leader in the effort to improve access and share best practices to cultural collections via Wikipedia, the Archives organized several meetings of galleries, libraries, archives, and museums as part of the GLAM-Wiki U.S. Consortium's advisory group. This summer the Archives hosted the Consortium's flagship outreach program: GLAM Boot Camp, a three-day skills-building workshop for Wikipedians interested in working with cultural institutions.

To connect audiences across the country to National Archives programming, we launched a new online engagement platform. With streaming video, live captioning, featured records, social integration, and an area for comments and moderated discussion, it offers audiences a chance to more directly connect with the programming and each other.

EDUCATION

Across the country, teachers and students of all ages are discovering the treasures of the primary sources in the National Archives through workshops, online experiences, and more.

The Boeing Learning Center in Washington, DC, hosted a number of themed family days like Constitution Day, workshops for kids and adults, and even a genealogy summer camp for teens! The Constitution-in-Action Learning Lab welcomed dozens of school groups and families, connecting our government's founding document to the present.

Students and teachers across the country participated in workshops and competitions for National History Day, using the resources of the National Archives for original, historic research. Educators in Georgia, Missouri, and Washington, DC, participated in Primarily Teaching workshops, learning new ways of incorporating primary sources in the classroom.

Through print and online advertising, media, events, direct mail, and online outreach, we continued to connect people around the country to America's story by promoting exhibits in the National Archives Museum in Washington, DC, as well as those traveling around the country, plus programming in the William G. McGowan Theater. In addition to traditional advertising, we continue to expand our outreach through social media and press – garnering more than 587 million media impressions across TV, print, and digital platforms.

This was also a year of many firsts! In February, YouTube sensation 'Kid President'—also known as 12-year-old Robbie Novak—joined us as a special guest at the National Archives sleepover, recording his experience and sharing it with thousands of people online! In concert with the spring launch of the new estore, we expanded the reach of the National Archives Store online with dedicated social media accounts. For the July 4th celebration, we created a Snapchat filter for those joining us at the home of the Declaration, which was shared in 1,725 snaps and stories. The year finished with a flurry of media attention thanks to the explosive popularity of "Hamilton" and our Records of Achievement honorees.

LOOKING AHEAD

The National Archives Foundation had an incredible year with the support and engagement of our members, donors, corporate and foundation partners. Thank you! With growing attendance, record-breaking web visitorship, and increased customers in our Archives Shop, the public's thirst and curiosity for our country's history has never been as high. The National Archives and the records it holds are in high demand. This is where the Foundation steps in.

For nearly a quarter of a century the Foundation has connected the public to America's story. We work tirelessly to amplify the Archives' work by drawing in critical funding for education programs, materials, and resources for teachers and students, exhibitions, public programs, and special events. Looking ahead, 2017 promises to be even more exciting as the Foundation is poised to continue to expand our reach across the country.

Our greatest focus this year and throughout 2017 is National Archives' groundbreaking "Amending America" initiative. The Foundation is partnering on elements in DC and nationally:

- The flagship exhibit in Washington, DC will be on display through September 2017, and includes a set of programs on the actual 225th anniversary of the Bill of Rights.
- The traveling exhibit will build more bridges to museums and communities across the country.
- The classroom exhibit will bring the Bill of Rights to 1,500 schools and libraries across all 50 states.
- The National Conversations on Rights and Justice will continue in New York City, Los Angeles, Dallas, and Washington, DC. These programs seek to foster dialogue by looking at our collective history and the challenges for rights.

The Foundation continues to stretch itself in how we can bring more citizens in contact with the Archives' records. On page 8, you read about the success of our exciting digitization grant which helped bring World War I and World War II film and photographs to the public. We are pleased to continue this donor collaboration with a new four-year, $1.65 million grant that will digitize records from its famous treasure vault, which holds some of the most sensitive and sought after records in NARA's collection - including original Indian Treaties, records of General Washington at Valley Forge, and Supreme Court case files like Brown v. Board of Education to name just a few.

Experience the National Archives to learn about our country's vibrant history. You can join us in person or online for the exhibits and programs, shop our exclusive merchandise and connect to the Foundation online via social media (@archivesfdn) or archivesfoundation.org. We want to hear from you throughout the year.

Thank you for your ongoing support!
